Body:

Dear Author First Name Last Name,

Re: Article Title; Journal Title

We recently emailed you to let you know that your institution has an open access agreement with Taylor & Francis. We're pleased to let you know that your library has approved Gold Open Access funding for your article through their Research Dashboard.

This means that your article will be published open access; it will be available online for anyone to read, anywhere.

What happens next?

If you have already signed an open access publishing agreement, you don't need to do anything.

If you have not yet signed a publishing agreement, or have already signed a non-open access publishing agreement, then you will receive an email asking you to sign a new publishing agreement. You will be asked to choose a Creative Commons licence, you can find more information about licence choice here. <http://authorservices.taylorandfrancis.com/publishing-agreements-your-options>. Please note that this can take 24 to 48 hours to reach you.

You will not be asked for any payment.

If you have any queries, please contact apc@tandf.co.uk

Best wishes,

Taylor & Francis offers a Standard Publication option and a Gold Open Access Publication option. These options do affect the author publishing agreement.

Standard Publication: This is the default option for this journal. Your article will be published in the journal, and made available online permanently for subscribers throughout the world. You will receive an eprint link that you can share with 50 colleagues who can then download the article free of charge. You may also choose green open access and deposit your Accepted Manuscript into an institutional or subject repository, though an embargo may apply (check your embargo here: <http://authorservices.taylorandfrancis.com/journal-list/>). Your Accepted Manuscript is the final version that you (and your co authors) will have worked on, prior to it being accepted for publication.

Gold Open Access Publication: You have the option to make the final version of your article openly available online at the point of publication, permanently, for anyone to read. An article publishing charge (APC) applies to this option and you can receive a personalised quote by using the APC Quotation service. Please note that this option is strictly your choice, and is not required for publication in the journal. More information on the details of this option are available here.

We sent the information about your article and funding onto your Organization's Open Access team to review.

Unfortunately, your request for this article has been declined. I am happy to say there are still options available to you to make your article Open Access if you are still interested.

You can make your final article Open Access through payment of a charge (Gold) or you can archive an earlier version of your article without any charge to you (Green). For the Gold option, you can pay the article publishing charge (APC) yourself or via another funder or source. Please find a revised APC quote attached, if you would like to choose this option please complete the quote here
